Rapid urbanization has led to a high reliance on a city's ability to deliver energy, transportation, water and sanitation, public safety, housing, and other public services. Globally, governments are tapping into the power of information communication technologies (ICT) to create and/or transform these foundation urban subsystems into smart, and enabling infrastructures to improve economic viability, environmental sustainability, and the quality of living.

For 25 years, Cyient has built unmatched expertise and proven competencies in providing geospatial, ICT, and IT-enabled services across utilities, telecommunications and governance. Cyient also specializes in service management and assurance, data management, and analytics — which cut across various city subsystems. Cyient has spent the last few years investing in and developing innovative Internet of Things (IoT)-based solutions for asset management, and field force automation services that add value to these subsystems.

Building on these capabilities, Cyient has created a partner ecosystem to deliver smart, interoperable, and standards-compliant solutions for smart cities.
