Hon Philip Dalidakis celebrates Cyient's local success and investment in the Australian market during keynote speech at Industry Partner Summit 2016

Melbourne, Australia, 06 April 2016 – The Honourable Philip Dalidakis, Minister for Small Business, Innovation and Trade, State Government of Victoria, has highlighted Cyient's successful operations in Australia over the past ten years during his keynote speech at the third annual Industry Partner Summit in Melbourne.

The minister congratulated Cyient for growing the business in the Australian market through successful projects with leading organisations in the country. He also acknowledged Cyient for playing a leading role in the future of Australia through the scholarships that the company has provided to local students of Deakin University. "It is fantastic that Cyient has had an Australian presence for over ten years, and that they are also investing in the future of our country by helping to fund research scholarships for students at Deakin University. I want to congratulate Cyient for giving back to the very people that are part of their workforce. This is what a lot of other companies need to start doing", said The Hon Philip Dalidakis.

Now in its third year, Cyient will continue to partner with Engineers Australia to bring together both international and Australian industry leaders to discuss how Australia can drive economic growth, productivity and competitiveness through collaboration and innovation. With over 100,000 members both in Australia and overseas, Engineers Australia, in partnership with the engineering community, has a strategic agenda to lead discussions on the critical issues facing the Australian economy.

With the theme of 'Driving Growth through International Innovation & Collaboration', the forum brought together senior government ministers, academia, and regional and international industry leaders as major contributors to the success of economies and business.

The Industry Partner Summit 2016 had a strong focus on how business leaders can drive business growth through smarter partnerships that access new markets, deliver an innovative workplace culture and embrace the opportunities of global disruptive technologies in today's fast-paced business environment. Leading the discussion were high-profile local and international speakers and participants.

"In today's dynamic business environment, companies are looking for smarter strategic partnerships that access new markets, deliver an innovative workplace culture, develop new ideas, and embrace the opportunities for global disruptive technologies. The Industry Partner Summit provides a platform to not only discuss ideas on how to do this, but also to network with senior leadership across industry, government, and academia to achieve this”, said Sanjay Krishnaa, Global Business Unit Head - Communications, Geography Head - Asia Pacific, Cyient Ltd.

An exclusive event, the Industry Partner Summit enables leaders to share key challenges and opportunities, through a high-level networking environment to identify solutions to manage investments in their respective regions. The event is run annually during March in Melbourne, Australia.
